In a time when so many people have lost their jobs and food prices have risen sharply, you are on the frontline of defense against food insecurity for our society's most vulnerable people. You help women fleeing violence; students trying to get on their feet; the unemployed; the under employed; seniors on fixed incomes; and so many more. Thank you for the work you do.

Denese G

Thank you so much for being a lifeline to people in need and for taking the risk of being in the community to serve during the pandemic. We know that it has been busier than ever, thank you for all the extra work despite additional stresses.

Sending appreciation one card at at time.
